All highways reopen in north central Kansas, travel still cautioned

All highways in north central Kansas have been reopened following the recent winter storm, according to the Kansas Department of Transportation.

Some highway closures were necessary due to so many vehicles sliding off the roadways or being stranded on the road. KDOT reminds motorists to drive with caution and give crews room to work as they continue to clear the roadways. Winds are causing snow to blow back and drift on highways, and some areas may be snow packed or icy.

Another round of winter weather is expected later this week. Motorists are encouraged to stay up to date with road conditions and prepare for the incoming weather.

Check KDOT's updated traveler information website, www.kandrive.gov, for updates on highway conditions across Kansas.
